ST. YVES WINS THE RACE

for a small fortune in prizes brought out a crowd that packed the newly arranged stands of the Polo grounds to the point of standing room. The day was not a pleasant one for an outdoor exhibition, but the 30,000 spectators, or at least a large majority who sat on the bleachers, put up umbrellas for protection against the April showers.

All After Frenchman. In the 5th mile there was a touch of the excitement the crowd had waited for. Shrubb, unable to stand the strain of the Flying Frenchman ahead, set out to catch him. He passed Dorando and soon cut St. Yves' lead to 50 yards, finally coming on even terms with him in the sixth mile.

St. Yves looked uneasy and sprinted desperately, soon leaving Shrubb far behind. Shrubb laughed and allowed him to go, dropping back with Dorando and Lombard. The Italian then started out to catch the Frenchman, cutting his lead to 35 yards at the end of the sixth mile, the time for which was 34 minutes 51 1/5 seconds. Hayes was lapped by the leaders and although the band played "The Star Spangled Banner," the crowd standing with heads bared to the rain, the Olympic winner refused to be enthralled to the point of increasing his pace.

Speeds Up in Eighteenth. St. Yves suddenly started at a speedy clip in the 18th mile, which brought him half a lap ahead of Shrubb in less than a mile. This was the first indication of Shrubb's weakening, and he appeared to be using his utmost strength to prevent the Frenchman gaining a lap. Lombard at this time dropped out of the race thoroughly spent.

St. Yves gained the coveted distance on Shrubb in the 20th mile, and there was a great roar for him from the crowd while the band again honored the leader by playing the French national anthem.

St. Yves' time for 20 miles was one hour 57 minutes 24 1/5 seconds, more than 2 minutes ahead of the Marathon record for the distance.

The standing of the leaders at the end of the 22nd mile was: St. Yves, 22 miles; Shrubb, 21 miles; 3 laps; Dorando, 21 miles; 1 lap; Hayes, 20 miles; 5 laps. It was now so dark that the runners could hardly be seen on the opposite side. On the first lap of the 25th mile Dorando passed Shrubb reaching second place. A moment later Shrubb gave up and staggered towards his dressing room done for. Hayes continued to gain but was tiring, and it was evident early in the 26th mile that he could not overcome Dorando's lead for second place. It was about dark when St. Yves with a sensational sprint crossed the line, winner of the race. Dorando, Hayes and Lombard kept on to the finish.

POLITICIANS AFRAID OF CONVENTION PROPOSITION

All Are Interested But Fear Possibility of Adoption of State-wide Plan.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 3.—The position of The Richmond Journal and the Lynchburg News, in advocating a Democratic State convention to be held this summer, is creating very great interest among the Virginia politicians at Washington. Some of them favor a convention without reservation; others profess not to have more than a corinthian interest in the matter, while some oppose the proposition outright.

Those who oppose it, and this includes others besides certain members of Congress, do not deny that their chief, if not sole, objection to the proposition is the fear that the convention will be controlled by persons who believe in State-wide prohibition, and that the convention will declare for prohibition extending to every city, town and county in the State.

Representative John Lamb, in an interview which was published yesterday, was bold enough to say he thought the convention might declare for State-wide prohibition, and confessed he did not care whether it did or not; he wanted a convention.

Would Convention Favor It? A very clear-headed Democrat, in discussing the subject today, said he doubted very much whether the convention would declare for prohibition. While it is true that about three-fourths of the counties of the State and all the towns, and about all the cities are "dry," it should be remembered that whiskey has been driven out in all the cities and towns, and in many of the counties, by very close votes, and that it is local option and not a State prohibition law which has brought about this result. It is not believed that all the local optionists who have achieved these various victories will be willing to vote for prohibitionist candidates for places as delegates to the convention in preference to candidates who are local optionists.

It must be confessed that others have expressed very strong belief that the party would declare for prohibition if the opportunity of a State convention were offered.

But it is realized that there are many issues besides prohibition in Virginia. Indeed, Rev. Dr. Cannon is understood to insist that prohibition is not an issue.

A Tidewater Democrat, when in Washington two or three weeks ago, before the question of a State convention was being discussed, said he thought it would be wise for the Democrats of the State to hold a convention and take some position which would recognize the necessity of legislation to further protect the oyster industry, and the fisheries of Virginia.

Tax equalization is also urged as a Democratic should make it such.

subject on which the party should declare itself.

As to Poll Taxes. The subject of the payment of poll taxes as a prerequisite to voting is another which Democrats have declared many times should be considered in a State convention.

Prohibition is looked upon as a danger also in all three of the questions mentioned in connection with the prohibition of the sale of liquor, and there will always be "danger" in a political party taking a stand on any question on which there is any considerable diversity of opinion within the party—danger for the politicians.

The truth of the matter is, said one of the Virginia representatives, who has not given permission to use his name, "prohibition is not and should not be a political issue. There is no reason why a State convention
